Worming his way through a transome over a rear door, a thief entered Brownell's shoe store some time Sunday night and secured $25 in change from the cash register. He left seven cents in pennies in the register and in his haste dropped a quarter on the

The robbery was discovered by Manager E. D. Boehm who came down about 5 o'clock with one of his assistants to trim windows. After work-about for a time, they discovered that the register was open and its contents gone. An anxious search of the desk in the rear of the store showed that about $250 contained therein had not been touched.

A broken catch on a transom leading from the yard of the M. Hurley property showed how entrance had been effected and dirty marks on the white paint proved that the robbery had been committed by no immaculate thief. To open the register the in-

It is presumed that a boy committed the robbery, for it would have been practically impossible for a man to squeeze through the transom, and by measuring the footprints of the thief. It was discovered that he wore a No. 4 shoe. So far as is known, no shoes were stolen.

Thieves who knew just what they wanted and who got it, broke the plate glass windows in the Connells.

and remove the weapons. The robbery was discovered by the proprietor Alexander Chinn, when he came down on Sunday morning. Night Watchman Hilson says that everything was all right at the store when he made his rounds at midnight.

The shoe store of C. W. Downs on North Pittsburg street was also entered by burglars sometime Saturday night or early Sunday morning. An entrance was gained through a window in the rear of the store. All that was missing were several pennies which had been left in the cash drawer Saturday night, the other money having been removed by Mr. Downs at closing time.

HARRISBURG, April 27.—Moving pictures displayed hereafter in Pennsylvania must conform to standards of morality and decency as prescribed by the State Board of Censors consisting of J. Louis Breitinger, chief censor, and Mrs. E. C. Niver, assistant censor. The standards to govern the "movie" displays have been carefully worked out by the board, and were made public today.

In its official announcement the board states that its purpose is to "restrict the motion pictures to such as would afford clean entertainment or amusement and to eliminate everything which would tend to debase or inflame the mind to improper adventures or false standards of conduct." Immorality and indecency are banned, and all expressions of crime to go, and also an suggestion of crime and depravity that are essential to a well told story. The sex play is absolutely barred, and the ban is put on everything sacrilegious.

WAVEING WILSON.

It is said that President Wilson feels keenly the weight of responsibility attached to the Mexican situation, and well he may.

He has displayed a very vacillating policy in dealing with the revolution in the war-torn country south of us. The "watchful waiting" was merely the excuse of one who failed.

Two courses were open to this country in dealing with the Mexican situation: One was to warn all American citizens out of the country, close our gates against it and let the factions fight their revolution to a finish with the warning to them that when order was restored and a stable government established claims for American damages would have to be settled. The other was to intervene on the spot, to see that American citizens were being robbed and murdered, and on the general ground that such intervention was demanded in the interest of peace and humanity.

President Wilson did neither. He pursued the waiting policy until finally reduced to the necessity of making open war on Mexico over the manner in which the latter should tender an apology for minor offenses. The contention that he is warring with one man is ridiculous. We are already at war with a whole nation.

It pursued to its bitter conclusion this war will be no holiday affair. It promises to be long and costly. Much blood and treasure will be spilled before it ends. It will not be like the war with Spain, which was from the nature of things on the high seas and soon ended. Mexico is a large territory, much of it mountainous and more of it plain, where subterranean is difficult and campaigning arduous. It is a guerrilla country wherein warfare may be kept up indefinitely. Conditions are very different from those which existed when our blue jackets sailed. "Chapultepec's rocky heights sixty-seven years ago. There was then a stable Mexican government and a united Mexican people. They had to be conquered but once, and it was sufficient to take their capital. In the meantime the polite offers of mediation, which have been accepted by the Washington government, but with no great hope of their leading to amicable settlement. We will probably have another week or so of delay, but whether intentional or not, it looks very much as if the die had been cast and the Rubicon was already crossed. If it shall so prove, the policy of "watchful waiting" should be dropped. It should be the American plan to strike swiftly and vigorously with a view of ending the war as soon as possible.

The only black spot on the brightness of Cleanup Day is the death of the South Conneltsville woman whose rioting caught fire from burning rubbish. In the next campaign against dirt the general orders should contain a suggestion to temper enthusiasm with safety first.

Confidence is touching, but accompanied by a bad breath it is simply overpowering.

The prisoners must hereafter appear before the Mayor with clean hands and faces no matter how black their hearts may be. Every day will be Cleanup Day in the Municipal Court hereafter. The new order is a distinct reform.

General "Jake" Coxy had better head his army right for the Mexican frontier.

After the women get a vote it is to be hoped that they will not also get the habit of betting bets on the election.

Sleeping against the soft side of a cactus plant with the horned lizards and rattlesnakes may be disquieting to our boys in the beginning, but it is preferable to bunking into the average Greaser.

Chauniqua statesmanship has the platform.

Cleanup Day is fixed at Uniontown this week. The victory is a given town, but always just one lap behind Conneltsville.

And now let's keep it clean.

In his determination to eliminate the motorcycle nuisance, Mayor Macrietta will have the earnest approval of the Conneltsville public. These offenders are fast travelers, and may speed away, but like the historic cat they always come back.

The law against flirting has been revised in Conneltsville. The prohibition will be wise to go slow.

The utter failure of the movement to organize a volunteer fire department on the East Side is a sad commentary on the public spirit of the young men of that section of the city.

Unless they are behind American guns in martial array, Mexico is no place for Americans.

Every now and then, owing to "accidents over which we have no control" the Baltimore & Ohio finds the Western Maryland convenient opposition.

The City Council business is serious business, and lots of it.

Speculation on the crops having been thorough if not complete, the crops will now strike out for themselves and do some tall growing.

BOWLING.

By GEORGE FITCH,

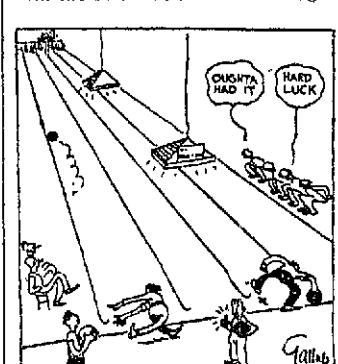

Author of "At Good Old Bivaw."

When Englishmen come to this country, they wonder, out loud, what Americans do for exercise during the long, cold winter months. And unless they get a chance to hang on a street car strap or visit a bowling alley, they never find out.

Bowling is the great American winter game, next to discussing baseball averages. The game consists of trying to knock down 10 wooden pins with a large ball. The pins are set in a stock at the end of an alley which looks as long as the sidewalk to New Jerusalem to the man who tries to roll a 16 pound ball down its middle for the first time. The ball is of wood or hard rubber and is of about the same size and consistency as the head of an old-fashioned railroad mangle.

Bowling appears to be a trifling game to the man who has not tried it. The pins look as thick and as large as a pine forest. However, the man who stands up at the end of the tenth frame with a full count to his credit is in vein for his team and a single pin standing frequently feels that he is shooting at a lightning needle in the next country. It is possible to make a score of 200 with 12 shots. It is also possible to accumulate 65 pins with 21 shots. This latter is much more frequently done. There are only a few 300 men in this country and they are usually pointed out to visitors by their admiring friends.

Bowling is full of strikes like baseball, but they bring joy and peace to the bowler and swell his score instead of causing him to gnash his teeth wildly and attempt to assassinate the umpire with a cruel word. Bowling is also full of "spares," "split" "rail-roads," "utrkeys," "poodles" and road nats. It is most noted for the latter

It is also possible to accumulate sixty-five pins with twenty-four shots. The game doesn't even need an umpire. After a man has bowled ten games with a total string-or, the two are life-long friends. It would take away much of the hard feeling now existing.

Bowling is said to be a cure for appendicitis and other diseases of the digestion. If this is true the bowling ball is the largest pill now in medical use.

Let us twine each thread of the glorious tissue of our country's flag about our heart strings, and looking upon our homes and catching the spirit which breathes upon us from the battlefields of our fathers, let us resolve that, come what or woe, we will in life and death, now and forever, stand by the Stars and Stripes. They have floated over our cradles; let it be our prayer and our struggle that they shall float over our graves. They have been unfurled from the snows of Canada to the plains of New Orleans, to the halls of the Montezumas, and amid the solitude of every sea, and everywhere as the luminous symbol of restless and beneficent power, and they led the brave and free to victory and to glory.—Holt.

Four Percent on Savings Accounts.

"Let him be," was the colonel's suggestion, adding a gesture in the direction of the eastern door through which Courtlandt had gone. "He's as big a man as Nora is a woman. If he has returned with the determination of winning her, he will."

They did not see Courtlandt again. After a few minutes of restless to-and-froing, he proceeded down to the landing, helped himself to the colonel's motor-car, and returned to the hotel. At the hotel he asked for the duke, only to be told that the duke and madame had left that morning for Paris. Courtlandt saw that he had permitted one great opportunity to slip past. He gave up the battle. One more good look at her, and he would go away. The odds had been too strong for him, and he knew that he was broken.

When the motor-car came back, Abbott and the baron made use of it also. They crossed in silence, heavy-hearted. On landing Abbott said: "It is probable that I shall not see you again this year. I am leaving tomorrow for Paris. It's a great world, isn't it, where they toss us around like dice? Some throw sixes and others deuces. And in this game you and I have lost two out of three."

"I shall return to Rome," replied the baron. "My long leave of absence is near its end. In the world can have happened," demanded Nora, showing the two notes to Celeste. "Here's Donald going to Paris tomorrow and the baron to Rome. They will bid us good-by at ten. I don't understand Donald was to remain until we left for America, and the baron's leave does not end until October."

"Tomorrow," dim-eyed, Celeste returned the notes.

"You play the fourth ballade and I'll sing for Madame. It will be very handsome without them." Nora gazed into the wall mirror and gave a pat or two to her hair.

When the men arrived, it was impressed on Nora's mind that never had she seen so amiable toward each other. They were positively friendly. And why not? The test of the morning had proved each of them to his own individual satisfaction, and had done away with those edited manners that generally are the result of nervousness in all eyes save their own. The revelation at luncheon had convinced them of the futility of things in general and of woman in particular. They were, without being aware of the fact, each a consolation to the other. The old adage that misery loves company was never more nicely typified.

If Celeste expected Nora to exhibit any signs of distress over the approaching departure she was disappointed. In truth, Nora was secretly pleased to be rid of these two suitors, much as she liked them. The baron had not yet proposed, and his sudden determination to leave her alone, she considered this a disagreeable possibility. She was glad Abbott was going because she had hurt him without intention, and the sight of him was, in spite of her innocence, a constant reproach. Presently she would have her work, and there would be no time for loneliness.

The person who suffered keenest was Celeste. She was awake; the tender little dream was gone; and bravely she accepted the fact. Never her agile fingers stumbled, and she played remarkably well, from Rubinstein, Chopin, Debussy, Schumann, and others. Nora, nervously enough, sang from old light opera.

When the two men departed, Celeste went to her room and Nora out upon the terrace. It was after five. No one was about, so far as she could see. She stood enchanted over the transformation that was affecting the countess and the lakes. How she loved the spot! How she would have liked to spend the rest of her days here! And how beautiful all the world was today!

She gave a frightened little scream. A strong pair of arms had enfolded her. She started to cry out again, but the sound was muffled and blotted out by the pressure of a man's lips upon her own. She struggled violently, and suddenly was freed.

"If I were a man," she said, "you should die for that!"

"It was an opportunity not to be ignored," returned Courtlandt. "It is true that I was a fool to run away as I did, but my return has convinced me that I should have been as much a fool had I remained to let you abuse me, begging for an interview. I wrote you letters. You returned them unopened. You have condemned me without a hearing. So be it. You may consider that kiss the farthest appearance so dear to the operatic heart."

He addressed most of this to the back of her head, for she was already walking toward the villa into which she disappeared with the proud air of some queen of tragedy. She was a capital actress.

A heavy hand fell upon Courtlandt's shoulder. He was irresistibly drawn right about face.

"Now, then, Mr. Courtlandt," said Harrigan, his eyes blue and cold as ice, "perhaps you will explain?"

With rage and despair in his heart, Courtlandt hung off the hand and answered: "I refuse!"

"Ah!" Harrigan stood off a few steps and ran his glance critically up and down this man of whom he had thought to make a friend. "You're a husky lad. There's one way out of this for you."

"So long as it does not necessitate any explanations," indifferently.

"In the bottom of one of Nora's trunks is a set of my old gloves. There will not be anyone up at the tennis court this time of day. If you are not a mean cuss, if you are not an ordinary low-down imitation of a man, you'll meet me up there inside of five minutes. If you can stand up in front of me for ten minutes, you need not make any explanations. On the other hand, you'll hike out of here as fast as boots and trails can take you. And never come back."

"I am nearly twenty years younger than you, Mr. Harrigan."

"Oh, don't let that worry you any," with a truculent laugh.

"Very well. You will find me there. After all, you're her father."

"You bet I am!"

Harrigan stole into his daughter's room and soundlessly bored into the bottom of the trunk that contained the relics of past glory. As he pulled them forth, a folded oblong strip of parchment came out with them and fluttered to the floor, but he was too busily engaged to notice it, nor would he have bothered if he had. The bottom of the trunk was littered with old letters and programs and operative scraps. He wrapped the gloves in a newspaper and got away without being seen. He was as happy as a boy who had discovered an opening in the fence between him and the apple orchard. He was rather astonished to see Courtlandt kneeling in the clover patch, hunting for a four-leaf clover. It was patent that the young man was not troubled with nerves.

"Here!" he cried, triumphantly, tossing over a pair of gloves. "If this method of settling the dispute isn't satisfactory, I'll accept your explanations."

For reply Courtlandt stood up and stripped to his underwear. He drew on the gloves and laced them with the aid of his teeth. Then he knelted them carefully. The two men eyed each other a little more respectfully than they had ever done before.

"This single court is about as near as we can make it. The man who steps outside is whipped."

"I agree," said Courtlandt.

"No rounds with rests; until one or the other is outside. Cienna breaks. That's out. All right, put up your dukes and take a man's licking. I thought you were your father's son, but I guess you are like the rest of 'em, hunters of women."

Courtlandt laughed and stepped to the middle of the court. Harrigan did not waste any time. He sent in a straight jab to the jaw, but Courtlandt blocked it neatly and countered with a hard one on Harrigan's ear, which began to swell.

"Fie!" growled Harrigan. "You know something about the game. It won't be as if I was walloping a baby." He sent a left to the body, but the right failed to reach his man.

For some time Harrigan jabbed and swung and uppercut; often he reached his opponent's body, but never his face. It worried him a little to find that he could not stir Courtlandt more than two or three feet. Courtlandt never followed up any advantage, thus making Harrigan force the fighting, which was rather to his liking. But presently it began to enter his mind convincingly that apart from the initial blow, the younger man was working wholly on the defensive. As if he were afraid he might hurt him! This served to make the old fellow furious. He bored in right and left, left and right, and Courtlandt gave way, step by step until he was so close to the line that he could see it from the corner of his eye. This gloom, swift as it was, came near to being his undoing. Harrigan caught him with a terrible right on the jaw. It was a glancing blow, otherwise the fight would have ended then and there. Instantly

he lurched forward and clinched before the other could add the finishing touch.

The two pushed about, Harrigan desperately striving to break the younger man's hold. He was beginning to breathe hard besides. A little longer, and his blows would lack the proper steam. Finally Courtlandt broke away of his own accord. His head buzzed

a little, but aside from that he had recovered. Harrigan pursued his tactics and rushed. But this time there was an offensive return. Courtlandt became the aggressor. There was no withstanding him. And Harrigan fairly saw the end; but with that in-discrepancy he was sore, mentally as well as physically; and he ate his dinner

without relish, in simple obedience

CHAPTER XIV.

Journey's End.

Harrigan dined alone. He was in disgrace, he was sore, mentally as

well as physically; and he ate his dinner

without relish, in simple obedience to those well-regulated periods of hunger that assailed him three times a day. In spring, summer, autumn and winter. By the time the water had cleared away the dishes,

Harrigan had a perfect, between his teeth (along with a certain matrimonial bit), and smoked as if he had the floor, much after the fashion of a man who has the toothache, or the earache, which would be more to the sary was a few blunt questions. Nora to run around barfooted and laugh

How children grew up! And they never grew too old for the bludge, they certainly never did.

They heard him from the drawing-room; tramp, tramp, tramp.

"Let him be, Nora," said Mrs. Harrigan, winily. "He is in a rage about something. And your father is not the easiest man to approach when he's mad. If he fought Mr. Courtlandt, he believed he had some good reason for doing so."

"Mother, there are times when I believe you are afraid of father."

"I am always afraid of him. It is only because I make believe I'm not that I can get him to do anything. It was dreadful. And Mr. Courtlandt was such a gentleman. I could cry.

But let your father be until tomorrow."

"And have him wandering about with that black eye? Something must be done for it. I'm not afraid of him."

"Sometimes I wish you were."

So Nora entered the lion's den fearlessly. Is there anything I can do for you, dad?"

"You can go, the witch hazel and bathes this lamp of mine," grimly.

She ran into her own room and returned with the stunner device for reducing a swollen eye. She did not notice, or pretended that she didn't,

that he looked the door and put the key in his pocket. He sat down in a chair under the light, and she went to work deftly.

"I've got some make-up, and tomorrow morning I'll paint it for you."

"You don't ask any questions," he said, with grimaces.

"Would it relieve your eye any?"

lightly.

He laughed. "No; but it might relieve my mind."

"Well, then, why did you do so foolish a thing? At your age! Don't you know that you can't go on whipping every man you take a dislike to?"

"I haven't taken any dislike to Courtlandt. But I saw him kiss you."

"I can take care of myself."

"Perhaps," he asked him to explain.

He refused. One thing puzzled me, though I didn't know what it was at the time. Now, when a fellow steals a kiss from a beautiful woman like you, Nora, I don't see why he should feel mad about it. When he had all but knocked your daddy to by-by, he said that you could explain."

"Don't press so hard," warningly.

"Well, can you?"

"Since you saw what he did, I do not see where explanations on my part are necessary."

"Nora, I've never caught you in a lie. I never want to. When you were little you were the truthfulest thing

I ever saw. No matter what kind of a licking was in store for you, you were not afraid, you told the truth.

... There, that'll do. Put some ointment over it and bind it with a handkerchief. I'll be back all right, but the swelling will go down. I can tell 'em a tennis ball hit me. It was more like a cannon ball, though. Say,

Nora, you know I've always poorpooped these amateurs. People used to say that there were dozens of men in New York in my prime who could have laid me cold. I used to laugh.

Well, I guess they were right. Courtlandt's got the stiffest kick I ever ran into. Apple driver, and if he had landed on my jaw, it would have been down before you say when you bid me good night in days. That's all right now until tomorrow. I want to talk to you. Draw up a chair. There! As I said, I've never caught you in a lie,

but I find that you've been lying a lie for two years. You haven't been square to me, nor to your mother, nor to the chap that came around and made love to you. You probably didn't look at it that way, but there's the fact, I'm not Paul Pry; but accidently I came across this," taking the document from his pocket and handing it to her. "Read it. What's the answer?"

Nora's hands trembled.

WRIGHT-METZLER COMPANY, CONNELLSVILLE.

SOON--THE MONTH OF MAY

Will You Meet it in Full Summer Dress?

In a few days we are in the first part of May; and the May month should find wardrobes stocked with the things for summer wear.

The Wright-Metzler stocks of apparel and toilette necessities for men, women and children are at their fullest and best right now. The holes made in the various collections by Easter buyers have been filled up with fresh, crisp, newer fashions for the hot days to come.

WHAT'S YET TO BE BOUGHT, BUY IT HERE FROM THESE FINER, FULLY DEPENDABLE, FASHION-PERFECT WEARABLES.

Buy with the full assurance that what you choose is RIGHT; that it will give you service; that it is fashionable, refined and of the highest quality. The price to you is to everybody alike, and the lowest price that such a grade can sell regularly for.

Here, the simple things for people of quiet tastes; and the things of an elegance and exclusiveness beyond the finest shown elsewhere.

Stocks are biggest in town; more varied; more certain to give service; most dependable; in fashion, fairest priced. Wright-Metzler's is the BEST store, after all!

Silk Suits

Elaborate but not overdone! Distinguished-looking, exclusive, they suggest a high order of refinement in dress.

Each model is a copy of a foreign-made silk suit. Every prominent feature is reproduced true to copy. The fabrics and trimmings are not the textures in the originals, nor were the garments made on the other side. However, the STYLE is in them—fully borne out by the excellent silks and laces they are made of.

The prices are clearly less than one would expect to pay. The suits did not cost us full price, nor have we marked them as much as they would regularly sell for.

Some of the models are daring; some are really simple. None are garish, and all have merit that more than justifies the prices asked.

An exact description is impractical—each suit would have to be gone into separately. You must personally inspect them to get even an idea of their charm. Briefly:

—the jackets are lined with pompadour silks; necks, collars and wrists are decorated with fine laces or self-materials puffed. Skirts are tulle-trimmed. The whole is embellished with drapes, puffs, cords, vest effects, silk knots, tassels and so on.

Silk poplins, more effects. Black, vesado, wisteria, stone gray, rust brown and French blue. Prices are $35, $39.75 and $45.00.
